Commission Hears Last Testimony in Marks Case

Decision on Dismissal of Police Chief Expected Next Week.

rector Sonnanstine took the stand, the director testified that he had told Powell of a rumor that an effort was being made to have Powell withdraw. Powell was asked by the director what he thought of the plan, but wouldn't answer, Sonnanstine said. Powell was quoted by the director as saying that he could get no recognition from Chief Marks, although Powell's testimony on the stand was that he had satisfactory cooperation from Marks at all times

Marks on Stand

The concluding session of the hearing last night, continued from last Monday night, found Chief Marks on the stand for the first time. He took the chair after brief arguments by attorneys at the outset of last night's session, to undergo a three-hour barrage of direct and cross-examination questions

Marks, on the witness stand, and his attorney, J Malcolm Strelitz, went into each specific instance brought out in Monday night's session in which the chief's policy and knowledge of his office were questioned

Most of these same incidents were again recalled and discussed in the cross examinations by W P Moloney, attorney for Mayor Jones.

Among the statements made by Marks on the witness stand was a remark that a general feeling seemed to exist at city hall that he was not wanted. "It didn't look good to me," Marks said. He also said that three subordinates committed infractions of rules that merited suspension. Within three days after the time he took office under the probationary period, he was greeted by an infraction of police rules that deserved a 30-day suspension, he said. Nothing more than reprimands resulted from these infractions which included holding out complete reports of police activity, according to his testimony.

Cooperation between himself and the safety director was described as "not so good" by Marks. He said he had never been called in by the director regarding the conduct of the department, and that the only time he was invited to the director's office was regarding an unemployment meeting. The director and other officials had already decided on a course of action in that instance and were merely asking his official signature, he testified.

Called at the close of the hearing, Director Sonnanstine said he had received complaints from Marks' subordinates that they could not get cooperation from the chief, but that he did not call Marks in to notify him of these charges or give him an opportunity to defend himself against them.

No Rules

The safety director never drew up a set of rules for the department nor advised him about principles or policies of the department, Marks said. However, the director and Captain Shrock had a number of three and four hour conferences at police station, presumably about department affairs, Marks continued. Regular reports of his activities were made verbally to the director for the first two or three weeks, but these were discontinued when the director continued to keep silent regarding affairs of the department, Marks said.

Although promised a set of orders from the safety director to guide him in his administration of the department's affairs, when he first took office, Marks said he has not yet received any orders from his immediate superior

On cross examination, Attorney Moloney went into a number of incidents of the 90-day period in great detail in an effort to show Marks had not performed his duty

Several of the cases were discussed by Marks both on direct and cross examination, and again by John Wiedemann, city prosecutor, who advised Marks on a course of procedure in some cases.

One regarded a case where police went to a residence Jan. 19 to search for stolen property. While there a youth confessed that he had a gun, which police identified as stolen. No charge was drawn against this youth although four others were prosecuted and convicted, the testimony showed Chief Marks did not file charges against the fifth youth on advice of Prosecutor Wiedemann, both he and Wiedemann testified

Another case in which Wiedemann testified that he advised the chief involved the arrest and imprisonment of a colored woman from Feb. 7 to Feb 25 without bringing formal charges against her. Wiedemann testified that there is no 72-hour limit on holding a prisoner without preferring charges, and that the colored woman was kept in jail largely because she was in poverty, without sufficient clothing or means of livelihood, and on advise of the humane officer.

A still which the chief allegedly "passed up" while in a Marion residence, during the probation period, was only part of a still which was not in use and which, according to its owner, had been found along the road, testimony of Chief Marks indicated last night.

After reciting the circumstances and quoting the law on evidence necessary for a conviction in a case of that kind, Wiedemann testified that he advised Chief Marks against a raid on the house for possessiong a still, because the one seen there was not complete and was not being used. This testimony corroborated earlier tsatements of Chief Marks.

On the stand, Marks answered a charge that he had not acted on a report received during his probation period that an automobile used in an Ashland bank robbery was in Marion. Marks declared he had searched for the car and notified his men to be on the lookout for the car.

He told how one man had been placed under a suspended fine and ordered to leave Marion after being arrested here on a loitering charge. He said he was advised on this case by the city prosecutor, and was not guilty of a charge of failing to take proper steps against the man.

To charges of inactivity following tips that a number of houses in the city reputedly selling liquor were "ripe" for raids, Chief Marks testified last night that he used his best judgment on making raids and kept a close watch over all suspected houses reported to him.

"When I thought the evidence warranted such action, raids were made," he said.

This same answer was given by Marks when questioned about a house which three prisoners at different times had told him was selling liquor. Reports that sales of liquor were given him both on March 5 and April 5 were confirmed by Marks who said no raids on the house have been made although it is still under surveillance.

Quizzed About Ball Pools

Marks was questioned by Moloney about the sale of baseball tickets and other forms of gambling here. Marks replied that he had been told such gambling was going on but that he had not seen it. "When I see it, I make arrests," he said.

Marks answered charges of alleged inactivity in connection with a recent automobile-train wreck by declaring that one man had been fined $300 for illegally possessing liquor in the car and that the driver of the car is now awaiting action of the grand jury on driving while intoxicated. He also said that a raid on the place where the liquor was said to have been purchased might have been made if his subordinates had called him on the morning the accident occurred. He said he did not learn of the accident until several hours after it had happened.

He answered a number of other charges of alleged inactivity on liquor cases by saying that on some occasions he and the city prosecutor could not make cases out of arrests, and that all suspected houses are being watched.

Marks also gave a brief resume of his life before becoming police chief. He is a graduate of high school, a navy course of study, and has done engineering and construction work as well as handling groups of men.

Questioning of Marks by Moloney regarding three raids on Marion residences without search warrants was prevented by an objection of Marks' attorney, whom the commission sustained.

Interest in proceedings last night ran high Those in the audience applauded on several occasions. All seats in the courtroom were taken at 6 p. m., an hour and a half before the hearing began. More than 1,000 persons were turned away by locked doors. Officials had some little difficulty in keeping the crowd outside subdued.

At the very outset of the session last night, the commission overruled a motion by Marks' attorney for the commission to refuse to approve the police chief's dismissal.

reality the idea of the World's series.

Broad of vision in baseball matters and with a wholesome interest in the diamond sport, Herrman saw the possibilities for increasing the popularity of baseball through an annual series for the world's championship between the pennant winners of the National and American leagues. He correctly visioned the future of such a fixed event after the post-season series between the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Boston Red Sox in 1903.

Among other things, the peace treaty provided for the establishment of the National Baseball commission to consist of the presidents of the two major leagues and a third member to be chairman. Mr. Herrmann was chosen chairman upon the organization of the commission in 1903 and served in that capacity until 1920, when the commission was dissolved and Judge Kenesaw M. Landis was elected high commissioner of baseball.

Herrmann became officially active in professional baseball in 1902 when, with George B Cox, political leader, and Julius and Max Fleishmann, he bought the Cincinnati Reds, national league team, for $150,000 from John T. Brush and Ashley Lloyd. He was elected president of the club and served in that capacity for 25 years.

Because of ill health, he resigned October 10, 1927, at the age of 68. His resignation was of necessity rather than choice and although the burden of the business affairs passed to the hands of C. J. McDairmid, Herrmann was always in touch with the Reds and frequently his counsel was sought by club officials. Herrmann was born in Cincinnati May 3, 1859, the son of Christian and Margaret (Meyer) Herrmann, both natives of Germany. He claimed the "University of Hard Knocks" as his alma mater, for when he was 11 years old he shouldered with his brother, Charles, 12, the support of their mother after their father had died.

Service Rewarded

In appreciation of his years of service the Cincinnati Baseball Club voted Herrmann a $25,000 bonus and a $10,000 annuity for the remainder of his life.

Herrmann's first business contact was with the printing industry and after learning his trade always carried a card of membership in the International Typographical Union. He took pride in exhibiting the card long after he quit that trade.

It was while working as a printer's "devil" that Mr. Herrmann acquired the nickname "Garry" which he was familiarly known throughout his life. The author of the name was a foreman of the type foundry, where Herrmann was first employed, who derived much pleasure in creating nicknames for his employes.

Fairness of judgment, ability as an organizer and good business sense brought him into politics and civic activities in Cincinnati, but he sacrificed possibilities for a brilliant political career to devote his life to baseball.

Herrmann was a past Grand Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, a high Mason and member of the Cincinnati Commandery, Order of the Mystic Shrine. In 1908 he was president of the National Bowling Congress.

His wife, Annie Becker, whom he married May 30, 1881, died several years ago They had one daughter Lena, who was married to Karl B Finke of Cincinnati in 1910

Daylight Saving Time Starts in East on Sunday

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, April 25—Watches and clocks of millions of persons will be an hour fast for five months beginning tomorrow.

In 437 cities and towns of the nation, most of them in the eastern states, daylight saving time becomes effective at 2 a. m. tomorrow. At that hour up-to-the-minute clocks, in theory at least, should register 3 o'clock.

Most persons will set their watches and clocks ahead before going to bed tonight, whatever the hour.

Daylight time will be observed in New York City and in 177 other communities in the state under local option. Of the larger cities of the state, two, Rochester and Syracuse, will continue on standard time. Almost all communities in New Jersey will advance the clocks, as will many in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. Transportation companies in most cases will adhere to standard time but change schedules in some respects

The system will remain in effect until the last Sunday in September, when the hour lost in sleep tomorrow will be picked up again. Advocates of daylight time argue that it provides cool morning working hours, decreases eye strain, gives an hour more of recreation in the evening.

Mad Pursuit

BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

(Copyright, 1931, Jessie Douglas Fox)

SYNOPSIS

"I hope I never see him again." But confusion lies behind Nora Lake's exclamation when Nicholas Thayer prepares to leave the villa where he has been the guest of her artist father. Battling against her dislike of the young artist, whom her father would like her to wed for the sake of the stability she craves, is an inexplicable interest in him. Possibly this is due to his being the brother of Jonathon Thayer, whom the motheriess Nora met two years before and who still lingers in her fancies. Again, through the return of Mrs. Nevers, owner of the Italian villa where they live, Nora faces more wandering. This dismay is forgotten when Nicholas, suddenly stricken which an infection, faces the loss of a hand.

* * *

A Happier Dawn

NORA fought to thrust such horrible thoughts aside as she heard the moans from the suffering Nicholas. If it had been herself, she tried to reason no one would have heard a groan from her.

Her father was like that too. He thought he was dying if he had a cold in his head.

But ever her troubled mind recalled Dr. Madroni and his gesture of cutting off the injured hand, and the fear that Nicholas might die persisted.

Her father came in at midnight, singing in his thin tenor. She ran to the head of the stairs calling for him to be quiet. But he continued and she ran down to him and caught his arm.

"Nicholas Thayer's very ill."

"What is it? Anything contagious?"

She put her finger to her lips and followed her father into his own room.

"Well, if it's blood poisoning I can't do anything. You'd better go to bed and forget him."

"But it's serious."

"It's the very devil it had to happen here," her father said irritably. "If only he'd waited until he left us."

Julian wrenched at his collar and flung it on the floor.

"I'm going to turn in," he said.

She looked at him, a pitiless judgment in her eyes. He tore off his shirt as though he were the one who was suffering.

"I've been everywhere to get some money. And that damn cook Magdalenna hasn't come back. Where's my dressing gown?"

"I gave it to Nicolias."

"Pretty soon you'll give him the roof over our heads."

"We haven't that to give. Mrs. Nevers has come back and she'll want the villa."

"What a mood you're in!" he cried.

When he was irritated it was Nora who, he said, was in a black mood, but she was too used to this to notice it.

"We'll see that he goes to the hospital in the morning."

"He won't go," she said patiently.

He shrugged. "When you're tired you look as plain as your grandmother. Don't wake me early. I'm all in."

It was as though her father had taken off the pleasant trappings of his mind and let her see what underlay his charm; weakness and irritability and his eternal preoccupation with himself. She wondered suddenly if he had ever loved her mother, that tempestuous Irish girl that he had met on one of his jaunts and married out of hand. She only knew that her mother had died when she was 7; and that her father never spoke of her.

She heard Nicholas groan and she went back to him. She saw his long lean body in the black dressing gown that came to his knees; the eyes seemed already sunken, the hair was tumbled and the cheeks showed the bony structure beneath them.

She kept a pan of water boiling on the methyl heater and as she dipped in the soft silk and applied it to the swollen hand she remembered how many times she had seen her grandmother with just such a small heater beside her, to heat milk when she lay awake at night. How long ago that was, like another life lived in a dream in the white New England house beside the cranberry bogs. Her grandmother had been dead for 10 years.

"Oh I must go home!" Nora thought.

To be dependent on no one but herself, to belong somewhere, to have deep roots! How she longed for this!

She had told Julian that their life had been like rushing along in a railroad train and looking out of the window to see other people in their homes while having none themselves.

The nostalgia of the last day centered itself in this burning desire. Nicholas roused and looked at her.

"What time is it?" Haven't you gone to bed yet?" Then he pulled his long legs over the side of the bed and began to move about the room, his hair tousled his face haggard with pain.

"I can't bear this, I tell you, I won't!" he flung out. "Haven't you some drug? Give it to me!"

She gave him the sedative again and watched him sink back on the bed. How these few hours had changed him, his eyes sunken in black pits, his face shadowy and gaunt. He lay with his face turned from her, one arm trailing on the floor, his legs sprawled out on the wide flat bed. From time to time he muttered to himself. Each time he groaned a knife blade clove her breast.

The room in the flickering light seemed heavy with pain. Pain lurked in the long shadows the lamp cast against the ceiling. His voice harsh and low spoke out like its echo.

"What's the use of it all? Futility. All futility. Work. Struggle. We're all under a death sentence."

At length she heard him breathing evenly; and her head dropped back and she too slept. When she woke it was almost light. She never forgot that pale dawn, the trees looming gray, then black, against a rosy sky, the grass sparkling, and far below the red cupolas of the city shimmering in the sunrise. Nicholas was awake, lying there watching her. He met her eyes almost diffidently.

She asked "How do you feel?"

"Better. It's painful, but bearable. And I'm hungry."

"Let me see." She stooped over him. The swelling of his wrist was much reduced. The hand itself did not look so ugly. "I'll bring you some breakfast," she told him.

She smiled but she was trembling after the long strain of the night. Once outside his door she leaned back against the wall and cried as though her heart would break. She wiped her tears on the back of her hand, knowing all at once, that she too was ravenously hungry.

To Be Continued.

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

SATURDAY. It rained last night, because everything was all wet, but the sky was clear and it was warm. I let Jubilee down by his rope and got into my short britches and went downstairs to get the pail and go out and milk the cow and her dotter, and my grandfather was getting ready to go fishing and when I asted him if he was going to the lake he said he was going after big mouth bass and asted me if I wanted to go along. I told him I didn't. The reason I told him I didn't was because I didn't. But I was glad he was going after bass, because when he goes after bass I don't have so many fish to clean as I do when he goes to the lake. He don't catch any at all sometimes, and when he does my mother don't care much for them. She thinks they taste like mud. But my grandfather says he'd ruther catch them because they are fighters. He said when he catches fish in the lake it is just like pulling up anchors.

He said he caught a hammer headed shark one time and it was bigger than the boat. He said he coaxed it near his boat by hanging a dead fish in the water. My ant asted him why he didn't just put his foot in the water, and when he told her hammer heads don't eat anything but dead things she said his foot would probably have fooled it, and that made him so mad that he forgot whatever lie it was he was going to tell. I wish she wouldn't butt in. I would like to hear him tell how he got it in the boat if it was bigger than the boat.

We went out and played around on the acting pole and played duck on the rock, till just when we were going to go out to muduriule pond or the stink factory or somewhere my mother called me and told me she wanted me to take care of Annabelle Lee, because my ant was going out and my mother had her Sunday baking to do, and I thought I would have to stay home all day. But Youniss asted if we couldn't dress Annabelle Lee up and take her along. So we did that, and her little old legs are so short she gets tired easy, so Youniss carried her, and then Feeble, and then Maggie, and then I carried her till my tongue hung out, and every time I would go to put her down she would put up a holler.

Youniss said she would love to have a little sister like Annabelle Le. I told her I would love to have her have Annabelle Lee. She said I was cruel. Then I said I would ruther be cruel than to be what anybody was that would like to have a baby sister. Then she got mad and said she was going home, so we all went with her. There wasn't any other place we could go with such a load to carry. But we had a pretty good time. Her mother opened a can of peaches and made some peach cobbler and Youniss got over being mad and Annabelle Lee went to sleep but I bet the bunch had a better time than I did.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

The Boys Propose a Plan

I FOLLOWED my small son into his room with the absurd little wish that I had permitted him to give his baby sister one of the ridiculous names Jerry Ticer had confided to him. There was something pathetic in his solemnity as he went back into the room, and when he carefully held the door open for me—a lesson in deportment which he and Roderick forget as often as they remember it—a little lump came into my throat which most mothers will understand. He was trying so hard to be a good boy, and I surmised what would be his answer to the appeal I had made to Roderick and him.

Roderick was standing with his hands on a chair, and he pushed it forward as I came in with an unconscious imitation of Dicky which would have brought a smile to my lips if I had not been dangerously near tears.

"Sit down, Auntie Madge," he said, and when I had seated myself he and Junior edged toward me.

"We've 'cided," Junior said, his head up, and speaking quickly, "that it's all right for Granzie and Grandpa to name the baby. And we're not going to say anything more about our names, either. You know we told you we had a scheme if you didn't name her our names."

"Yes dear," I said a bit unsteadily, for I saw that my boy's disappointment was a bitter one, and that he was having hard work to keep back the tears which he lately has considered unworthy of a "big boy."

"Well! me and Rod. I mean Rod and I," he amended conscientiously, "had fixed it up so, even if you didn't name the baby Ruby Pearl or Opal Violet, we'd name her that ourselves, and always call her those names when nobody else was around. We were going to take turns, 'cause each of us liked a different name, and one week we were going to call her Ruby Pearl, and the next one her name would be Opal Violet. But we don't think that would be fair, so we're never going to—never going to——"

His voice trailed off into a choke, and he turned away from me abruptly, patently fighting the tears. I spoke briskly, forcing down my sympathy in order to help him and Roderick also, for though Dicky's young nephew was not as intensely concerned as Junior, his face was exceedingly doleful.

"But you are going to," I assured him. "I think that's a wonderful plan. Only, I want you to let me in on it, too. We won't tell anybody else, except perhaps Dad, and when we're all alone together, we'll call our baby your names but we'll never, never let anybody else know about it. We'll just have it our own secret."

"Mums' Do you mean it?"

"Auntie Madge. Aw Gee!"

Junior whirled and catapulted himself upon me and Roderick was not an instant behind him. They hugged me so enthusiastically that I wondered if my ribs were intact and then they drew back together facing me, their eyes wide and bright.

"N nobody's goin to know bout it 'cepin' you and Dad?" Junior asked.

"No, not a soul. It will be just our secret. That is," I added, with a Machiavellian eye upon the real reason for sending them to their room, "if you can keep a secret. Do you think you can?"

"Can we keep a secret?" Roderick boasted, his chest measure increasing perceptibly. "Just try us, eh? Jun?"

"You bet your boots," Junior was equally emphatic.

"That's what I'm going to find out," I told them. "There's a secret I'm going to ask you to keep for me. Then if you succeed in doing that, I'll know that I can let you have these names for your little sister as a secret."

"I knew there was a catch in it somewhere," he said to Junior, emphasizing almost every word.

But my small son, knowing me better, smiled up at me confidingly. "It's all right, Rod," he said. "You don't know my mother. If she says she'll do a thing, you can put your money on it."

His unconscious imitation of Dicky with his last words saved me from the chokiness that his proud way of saying 'my mother' gave me.

"Thank you darling," I told him. "You both will see that you can trust me. I must know that you can keep this important secret first. I want you both to promise me that you will say nothing to anybody—anybody—remember about Hank's burning those trousers and having to go to Bridgehampton for another pair. Uncle Harry and Aunt Lillian and Marion and Mary have all promised to say nothing about it—you see you told them, Junior, before I could stop you and so Hank and Bill will think nobody knows. They'd be terribly embarrassed if they thought Mary and Marion knew."

Dead Ball Is It—15 Homers Rattle off Big League Bats

HORNSBY BANGS TRIO OF FOUR-PLY CLOUTS AS BRUINS WIN, 10-6

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Major league pitchers have generally held the upper hand over the batters so far this season, but in one fell swat the boys have shown that the new "dead" ball is not so dead that it can't be hit hard and far

Seven major league games yesterday produced 15 home runs, and plenty of additional extra base swats. Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Cubs, never much of a distance hitter a few years ago until he began adding beef to his frame, clouted three home runs in succession to play the leading role in his team's 10-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

With one single to boot, these three homers accounted for eight runs and tied the modern major league record for homers in one game. The all-time mark is four, made by Bob Lowe and Ed Delehanty back in the 90's.

The home run hitting was distributed among nine clubs, the three by Hornsby and two by Glenn Wright of Brooklyn gave the National league, with the supposedly deader ball, a 9-6 margin in the number hit. Wright's swats, one homer by Del Bissonette and some fine pitching by Watson Clark, enabled the Robins to win their second game of the season, defeating the Boston Braves 6 to 1.

The Phillies and New York Giants put the first tie game of the season on record as darkness halted their clash after 12 innings with the score 7 to 7.

Al Simmons, whose failure to hit has retarded the progress of the champion Philadelphia Athletics, broke loose to connect for a homer and two triples to lead the A's to a 10-7 victory over Washington.

Red Ruffing combined pitching and hitting as the Ruth-less Yankees trounced the Boston Red Sox 7 to 4. Earl Whitehill gave the St. Louis Browns five hits, two of them homers, in a mound duel against Sammy Gray, Detroit winning 4 to 2. Willis Hudlin of Cleveland pitched a four hit shutout against Chicago for eight innings and let up the ninth to gain an 8 to 1 triumph.

Penn Star Out for New Record in Track Event

BY ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 25 Before Barney Berlinger settles down to business, he hopes to fulfill two ambitions—win the Olympic decathlon championship at Los Angeles, in 1932, and at the same time establish a new world's record in this all-around athletic test of brawn and skill

The captain of the University of Pennsylvania track and field team shattered his own record for the second straight year in the Penn relay carnival yesterday His tutor, Lawson Robertson, who will be head coach of the next American Olympic team, thinks Barney will achieve his twin-goal

This one-man track team had the American decathlon record in his grasp and the world's record in sight when he slumped toward the finish of yesterday's ten-event grind. A series of minor bad breaks was climaxed by poor take-offs that prevented him from clearing more than 12 feet in the pole vault, an event which he never has failed to do 12 feet 6 inches, and frequently cleared 13 feet.

This setback convinced him it was not his day and he jogged through the 1,500 meter run, the final event, finishing a poor last in a field of six. As it was, he set a new carnival record of 7735 6135 points.

Barney won five of the ten events but was short of his best marks in the pole vault, high pump, 100-meter dash and 110 meter hurdles.

Ohio State's runners faced today's final program with an edge over the rest of the big eastern and midwestern field. The Buckeyes lifted the quarter-mile sprint medley relay crowns from Chicago, beating a crack Navy quartet in a thrilling finish for the sprint medley title in carnival record time 3 27 6-10. Jack Keller, Ohio hurdler, raced to a new carnival mark of 14.7 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 25 — Clyde Hatter, youthful Louisville southpaw hurler, evidently is in a great hurry to pitch himself into a major league job.

Hatter yesterday pitched his second consecutive shutout victory of the American Association season, whitewashing Kansas City, 2 to 0, and setting a season strikeout record of 13.

Indianapolis checked the wild-hitting rampage of the Milwaukee Brewers and did some slugging of its own to win 12 to 3.

Columbus and Minneapolis divided the first doubleheader of the league season, the Red Birds winning the first one, 13 to 10, and dividing the second, 10 to 6, in five innings. The second game was called to permit the Millers to catch a train.

A pair of home runs, one each by Durst and Davis, gave St. Paul a 6 to 5 victory over the Toledo Mud Hens.

Salem Favored To Win in Mansfield Relays

By The Associated Press

MANSFIELD, O., April 25—Mansfield's four-year reign over its own annual Mansfield relays appeared at an end today as close to 600 athletes, representing 36 senior and junior high schools, vied for the team championship and 12 trophies.

Salem was regarded the likely winner, due to an impressive record so far this season. Sandusky and Columbus East looked like the next two, with Cleveland West Tech and Akron also strongly in the running.

Other squads came from Burgoyne, Newark, Ashley, Lorain, Garfield, Elyria, Parma, and Alliance.

Charlie Jamieson, veteran Cleveland outfielder, needs only 24 more hits to reach the 2,000 mark for major league competition

TRINITY BAPTIST S. S. BOLSTERS LINEUP FOR 1931 PENNANT RACE

Main Street Organization Likely To Stage Several Upsets This Season.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

LAST season the Trinity Baptist Sunday school recreation ball club opened the season by shellacking the Calvary Evangelical club 10 to 2 and then proceeded to drop all the rest of the contests in the first round of play In the second round Trinity came back with a rush defeating every other league entry before the season was completed

Trinity backers this year are wondering if the Baptist team will be able to continue its winning ways. It will be necessary for the team to play even better ball than last year to continue in the win column for the competition this season will be stronger. Manager Bill Martin of the Trinity outfit has added several players to his lineup in an effort to develop more punch. The question now is whether he has succeeded in adding the desired punch.

Lineup Stronger

There is no doubt that Trinity will be stronger this year than last The club has been showing a lot of power in practice sessions, clouting the ball with gusto and fielding with a degree of accuracy hitherto unknown to Trinity teams.

According to pre-season calculations, Trinity is not strong enough to win the league championship this season The team looks just about tough enough to be a stumbling block in the path of the pennant contenders. The Baptists have in the past had a habit of upsetting title-bound teams and it is not unlikely they will continue to do the same this season.

Anderson Catching

Bill Martin has obtained a new catcher for the team this season and one that is likely to aid the team's punch considerably. Don Anderson will do the backstopping. Anderson is an experienced man and should be a tower of strength.

Hap Applegett will get the call on the mound with Chuck Osterholt, a southpaw and Starling Somerlot ready to fill in the relief roles. Somerlot is also the first string left fielder for the team. He is a better outfielder than a pitcher, although he has shown flashes of form in the box.

The Merchant brothers, Bob and Watt, form the brother act for the Trinity team, the former on first and the latter at shortstop. Staley will cavort at the keystone sack and Homer Little will again guard the hot corner. Little is slowing down somewhat but still able to play the third base post a lot better than most of the younger players.

Welcome Addition

Glen Price, Erie Roundhouse outfielder of 1930 is the latest addition to the Trinity outer gardens. Price will play in center for the Baptists and this assures this post being well taken care of. Price also swings a mean war club at the plate and Trinity's home run total for the year will probably be swelled considerably over 1930.

John Merchant and Doane will alternate in right field. Osterholt might displace either of them if he shows up well in the remaining practice games.

Reserves are lacking for Trinity. Wainfor and Robertson, infielders, are about the only replacements available. Several younger players are on the roster but none of them are likely to make the grade in Marion competition this season.

Monday: Epworth Bishops, Jim Lingo, manager.

Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, April 25—Tony Canzoneri, grinning Italian from New York, has scaled pugilistic heights never before attained by a little fighter.

Little Tony, a shortender in the betting, last night fought one of the finest battles of his eventful career to wreck the drive of Jack (Kid) Berg, of England, by a stunning knockout victory in the third round of their scheduled 10-round double-barreled title bout.

The triumph over the gallant son of Great Britain preserved Canzoneri's hold on the lightweight championship of the world, and added Berg's junior welterweight crown to the Canzoneri collection.

Before he climbed into the ring last night to tackle Berg, who had not met a reverse in 26 starts against ranking opposition, there was more talk that Canzoneri was washed up—legs gone. But he fought a cold, perfect battle to completely outclass Berg.

Cool and watchful, he walked out in the first round and without wasting motion or taking an unnecessary step, Canzoneri went to work on the slambang Britisher. In spite of his apparent mastery, the knockout lacked nothing in dramatic thrill. They stood in a neutral corner firing away, Canzoneri carefully and Berg working in his characteristically windmill fashion.

Tony stepped away, then in, dropping two sharp rights on Berg's head. Berg kept on moving it, but straightened up just in time to take a perfectly aimed right smash full on the chin. He flopped to the canvas like a sack of meal, thoroughly out.

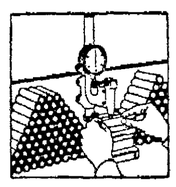
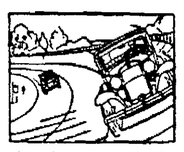
Soundly built to serve you long and well



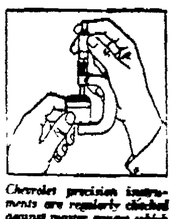
The piston pin test—showing one of the many marvelously accurate gauges used to maintain Chevrolet quality

If you could see the new Chevrolet Six being built, you would understand why it performs so well, lasts so long and brings so much satisfaction and pleasure to its owners. The quality of raw materials is held to standards unsurpassed anywhere in the automotive industry. In the manufacture of the engine alone there are hundreds of separate inspections. Pistons are matched in sets to within one-half ounce. Piston pins must be within 1½ tenths of one one-thousandth of their specified size. Connecting rods are matched to within one-quarter ounce and are individually fitted by hand. The special alloy-steel crankshaft is the subject of truly amazing care and precision in manufacture and cannot vary from perfection in balance more than ½ inch-ounce!



Chevrolet cars are run millions of miles each year at General Motors' great proving ground

These few examples of Chevrolet standards indicate the care used in the manufacture of every part of the car. Soundly built to serve you long and well! No compromise with quality in manufacture means no compromise with complete satisfaction in ownership.



Chevrolet precision instruments are regularly checked against master gauges which are accurate to one millionth of an inch

STOCKS MOVE IN DOWNTREND

Persistent Liquidation Force Share Prices Generally Lower Today.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK April 25—Persistent liquidation poured through the stock market in today's week-end session, wearing the general level of share prices down closer to the bear markets low established in December.

Selling was orderly and in only moderately large volume, in view of the fact that the market had to digest the news of the suspension of one of the largest commission houses late in yesterday's session.

Losses in pivotal industrials and utilities were largely restricted to a point or two, although substantially wider declines appeared in spots. Transactions for the two-hour session were around a million and a half shares.

Short covering, or possibly supporting orders, gave several of the prominent issues slight upturns in the early dealings, but these were soon lost. Selling gained volume as the session wore on.

U. S. Steel lost only a point, holding above its recently established minimum for 1931. General Electric, however, dropped 2 to a new low for the present stock, created by a splitup early in 1930.

Week-end business and industrial news was perhaps more favorable than otherwise. An estimate of steel mill operations in the Youngstown area next week indicate that there will be no further slackening of output. The weekly mercantile reviews were conservative in tenor, but pointed to slightly better reports from wholesale trade.

Sears Roebuck's report on sales for the fourth period of its 4-month calendar made the best showing of the year to date, with a reduction of only 5 4-5 per cent from the like period of last year, while the aggregate decline for the first 16 weeks was 10 3-10 per cent.

Will Gets Big Kick Out of Long Air Ramble in Tropics but Hollywood Is as Far as Mrs. Rogers Cares To Go

BY WILL ROGERS

WELL all I know is just what I read in the papers or what I see as I prowl hither and thither. And Brother believe me I been doing some prowling lately. For a long time I have wanted to go messing around in the Central American Countries, and the establishment of an Air line all through there give me just what I was looking for. Now in the first place you can leave almost any American place right by Plane and go either to Ft. Worth Texas, Brownsville, Texas, or Atlanta, or anywhere along the line and catch the Pan American line. It leaves American Territory at Brownsville and goes to Tampico and Mexico City then from Vera Cruz, Mexico on down through all Central American countries, then around through the north Coast of South America, and back up by way of Virgin Islands, Porta Rica, Cuba and all Points east.

Too Far for Mrs. Rogers

I had had the idea in my head for a long time. I wanted Mrs. Rogers to go with me. She got one look at the map, counted the Countries and reached for a time table to Hollywood, said that was as far as she was traveling right now. Ever since a kid those countries and names appealed to me. I used to study in Geography not much but a little about Guatamala, San Sal-Vador Costa Rica Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama Columbia, Venezuela, British Guiens and all the mess of em. Well just think of the pleasure of getting up one morning, having breakfast at home in Santa Monica grabbing the Plane and being in El Paso Texas, at 1 o'clock going over the Rio Grande River to Juarez to get some beer and see a Bull fight, as it was Sunday afternoon and my Plane dident leave there till Monday morning for Mexico City.

Did you ever visit Juarez Mexico? Well dont miss it. I went by the Bull Ring and bought our Tickets as I had about 4 pilots from the line who had brought me in from Los Angeles American Airways Co, and a great line. Well the fight was not to start till it got cool, for they wont even kill a Bull till the sun is so low that the Fighter won't get sunburnt. Then as we were driving around the Town I saw a fellow with a lot of braided Uniform get on an old poor decrepid Pony, and I just knew from his make up that he was headed for the Bull ring so I got cold feet and dident go. I gave away my tickets to some fellows that hadent been saved as many times by Horses as I had.

Rapid Transit

Well prowled around and saw all the sights of the town, then back and early the next morning out to the Airport and then by the C. A. T. line. "Continental Aerial Transportation." American Pilots, powered with wasps on Bochead Planes. Well anybody that flies knows that from pretty near any part of our Country you can leave and be in Mexico City the next night and not fly nights either.

Right down over Chicawawa, (thats not the way its spelled but thats sorter like it sounds) thats where the old Mexican Tarasas had the biggest Ranch in the World, a whole State, flew right over his old Headquarters ranch, lost it all during the various Revolutions. Poncho Villa lived off him alone for years.

Well we must get moving. Got to Mexico City that evening about four thirty. Made my first speech in Spanish for the Spanish movietone. I know few words but none of 'em fit what I want to say but I just used em all anyhow. I heard afterwards that in the Theatre that it went big. Well it would. I was sorter panning our Country and boosting theirs. It dident take much exaggeration to do either one. Met a lot of old friends at the field that I had known there during a previous visit, and then out to Mr. Clarks, the American Ambassador there who took Mr. Morrows place. He is a real fellow and is doing a fine work. He was very familiar with Mexico for years, and he is well liked there now, and it took some Guy to follow that little fellow Morrow, (anywhere). He hasent done much in the Senate, but thats what makes him great. The more you do in there the worse you are, and the more your constituents suffer.

Getting Warmer

Well after I got through with Mexico City, hit out for the real Tropics, down through Vera Cruz, then out of there on the Pan American Airways, and over the real Jungles, and stopped first at a little Mexican Army Post called San Geronimo. Gassed up, was thirsty but everybody said, dont drink water in the tropics, and by golly I havent. And my first Mangole, I believe it was to eat. Now we are on the west Coast of Mexico, we have crossed the neck, or straights and are headed for Guatamala. We make some other one on the line, and then into Guetamala City, the Capitol of that Country. We have seen it on the Maps of our old Geographys. Its in the rolling hills, and quite a bit of Aviation activity, and is a pretty little City from the air. They raise Coffee, and tell you that its the best there is in Central or South America.

But wait a minute, we haven't got to Costa Rica yet, and they tell you that too, and I believe they got it on Guetamala, and Honduras, and all the rest on the quality. Its so good that America wont pay the price. Its most all shipped to Europe. It grows on a little bush, and they have high trees planted all among it to shade the Coffee Plant, sometimes Banana Trees, but generally big wide looking shade trees.

You would be surprised at the amount of people that speak English in all these Countries. Almost all the young men of wealthier families are sent to our Schools since the war in preference to Europe, and they speak better English than we do. I cant get you all the way down now, but I will get you to the Canal the next letter. Its quite a gully.

GRAINS TEND LOWER TODAY

Suspension of Defunct Member from Exchange Has Slight Effect.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, April 25—After a fractionally irregular start grain prices tended downward early today. The principal bearish influence was formal announcement read from the gallery that Pynchon Company had been suspended but the market effect was relatively slight. Opening at ⅛ cent off to ⅜ cent up, wheat later underwent a moderate sag. Corn started ¼@½ cent lower and subsequently held near to the initial range.

Considerable tension at the outset was apparent in the wheat pit, especially, with talk heard that Pynchon & Company was short of much wheat in Chicago and long at Liverpool. Surmises, however, that as a result selling orders would be executed here to even up accounts failed of verification to any important extent, and the closing out of the firm's open interest in wheat made little impression. The fact that the Liverpool wheat market showed comparative strength had a steadying influence.

Corn and oats both established new low price records for the season, but the fresh declines were only minor. Selling was largely in the nature of liquidation by holders of May contracts. The minimum prices reached on oats were the lowest since 1901. For the first time of late, corn primary receipts showed decided curtailment. Provisions were firm, upheld by steadiness of hog values.

LOW CENTER OF GRAVITY

ACCEPT NO CAR WITHOUT IT

The whole trend in motor cars is toward low center of gravity—in the achievement of which Dodge stands squarely in the forefront of progress.

Low center of gravity means safety. It means beauty, expressed in low-swung sweeping lines. It means a steadier riding car. Easier control, easier steering at high speeds.

In the new Dodge Six and Eight, it means even greater strength of chassis than in the past. For the Dodge Double-Drop frame has a box-type center—so powerfully reinforced that the hardest going at any speed cannot transmit destructive strain to the car.

See these dependable new Dodge cars. Drive them. Learn how much in beauty, how much in performance, how much in comfort and luxury they offer. You'll quickly realize why the country is united in the opinion that Dodge gives the great value of the year.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "CITY LIGHTS" TO BE HERE NEXT WEEK

Picture Three Years in Making To Open Monday.

BY HALLIE HOUCK

THE most talked of picture of the year, it's been three years in the making, is Charles Chaplin's "City Lights," opening at the Palace Monday.

Chaplin wrote, directed and produced this picture. He admitted to sound effects, but not one line of dialogue is spoken. It is his stand against the talkies in which he does not believe, and in cities where it has been exhibited has drawn record crowds to make a talking picture sensation blush with shame.

Chaplin has described his picture as "A romantic comedy in pantomime." His guest at the world premier of "City Lights," was no less an eminent man than Dr. Albert Einstein, proponent of the Einstein theory of relativity—if that means anything to anyone except Einstein.

"GOD'S GIFT TO WOMEN" PLAYS AT OHIO

Frank Fay is God's gift to women in the picture by that title playing at the Ohio Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. He's delightfully carefree in his acting, and the story is ideally suited to the leading role in this French farce.

Laua LaPlante, Joan Blondell, Louise Brooks, Yola D'Avrill, Margaret Livingston, Ethlyn Clair, Nena Quartaro and the Sisters G are the women in the cast.

Fay is Barbara Stanwyck's husband. He's a red-headed Irish-American New Yorker who is one of the few players permitted to "ad lib" in the talkies. He is one of the comedians who can think of the right thing to do and say, on the spur of the moment, to get the laughs. He was a Broadway favorite in "The Passing Show," "Oh, What a Girl," "Girl of Mine" and "Artists and Models."

Eddie Lambert, who made his biggest Broadway hit as Potash in "Potash and Perlmutter," plays the part of a guide to American tourists in Paris.

Pallette and Miss Fazenda are teamed as the comedy lovers and Arlen and Miss Brian are the romantic leads. Guy Oliver who plays the part of the sheriff has played in over 500 pictures in his long movie career. Nearly 400 of these have been in Paramount pictures.

Charles Chaplin Laura LaPlante

They have written a number of talkie stories including "Young Eagles," "The Mighty" and "The Light of Western Stars."

MARION PICTURE LAID IN RUSSIA

Suppose a madman was killing the members of your family one by one and each time they were supposed to die they received a ruby trinket, what would you do? For the answer to that question you should see "Drums of Jeopardy" now playing at the Marion theater with Warner Oland playing in one of his favorite roles, that of the madman. June Collyer is the feminine interest. She is in the role of Kitty.

The show opens in Russia and we find Oland as Dr. Boris Karlov a chemist, who vows to kill every member of the Petroff family to avenge the death of his daughter. He has a ruby necklace which is known as the "Drums of Jeopardy" because of its unique make and he returns one drum at a time and the members of the family receiving the drum is the next to die.

JOE E. BROWN AT BEST IN "TOP SPEED" AT OHIO TODAY

Wise-Cracking Champ Is Good for Laugh a Minute.

JOE BROWN at his best in a goofy, wise-cracking role sails through "Top Speed" at the Ohio with gusto. The comedy is that fast and quick kind that is blatant—no subtlety, but plenty of entertainment.

Jack Whiting, Bernice Claire and Laura Lee support Brown. Brown and Whiting are two clerks trying to put over the idea with two girls that they are millionaires. Whiting accepts $15,000 to throw a motorboat race in which he is pilot and gives the money to Brown, with no story of how he got it. Brown turns around and bets the wad on the Whiting boat. To add to the misery, someone tells the girls that the boys are only clerks. There's a grand finale with romance holding sway. Joe Brown puts up a grand bluff, and is good for a laugh anytime.

A newsreel, comedy and short subject are on the bill.

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. S. F. PORTER
Pastor Emmanuel Baptist Church

II Chronicles 7:14—"If my people which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

• • •

He that hath ears let him hear what Almighty God saith to his people Why is it that ye do not HEAR? Sin, yea sin, defiling, corrupting, damning, and slaying, has stopped the ears of the backsliding people of God Therefore you are indifferent to his call, and the gates of hell are crowded with professing Christians. My heart is broken, my soul is faint, when my Lord calls to his people and oh, so few give ear and respond.

What if every church were filled to capacity, by man-made inventions and worldly methods by entertainment, suppers, etc Oh you poor blind souls what would the profit be when there is no fire upon the altars and no souls saved from sin?

It is written 'My house is the house of prayer, but behold what man has made it, even from a theater to a restaurant Will these things go unpunished? Did they in the days of our Lord?

In God's word as revealed in the verse above he tells us to do four things First humble ourselves, second pray third seek his face, and fourth turn from our wicked ways, (Ways, is right Lord for there are many of them). If we both ministry and people, will obey God and plead the blood, and honor the Spirit, the worldly things will pass away, the fire will be rekindled on the altars and multitudes will be gloriously saved. God is still on the throne willing to forgive and able to deliver Let us do his will turn to him on our knees, praying, and seeking his face, and God will do the rest

One of the projects involves the widening of two and one-half miles of the Kenton-Bellefontaine pike from the end of the paved section south of the city to the newly constructed portion of the highway. A sum of $20,000 is allowed for this work, it was said.

Paving of the highway north of Ada, connecting the college town with the Lincoln highway, is also included in the tentative improvement program for the county, according to information. This work is to cost approximately $46,000.

The third project includes the construction of two new bridges on the Kenton-Marseilles route at a cost of approximately $10,000, it was said.

Flashes of Life

By The Associated Press

VALENCIA, Spain—Efforts are to be made to bring Vicente Blasco Ibanez in death back to the country from which he was exiled in life because of his Republicanism. The famous novelist died in 1928 and is buried at Menton, France. The municipality is sending representatives to Menton in an endeavor to have his body returned to Valencia and reinterred with honors.

HANOVER, Germany — A stream line passenger coach driven by propellor has whizzed at the rate of 110 miles an hour on a five-mile stretch of railroad track. The sponsors say the zep on wheels did not have space for real speed. They hope for 150 miles an hour.

GOVERNOR DECLINES STAY OF EXECUTION

Hamilton Barber Must Pay Penalty in Chair for Murder of Son.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 25 — Charles King, Hamilton barber, today had exhausted his last weapon in his fight to escape the electric chair next Thursday.

Yesterday, after the supreme court had rejected his appeal from the death sentence, Governor White refused to commute his sentence to life imprisonment. Unless the governor changes his mind before the execution, King has no other recourse.

King was sentenced to death for the slaying almost two years ago of his son. Although he was tried and convicted only on one charge, he was accused of slaying his wife and three other children at the same time. Their bodies were found at the King home, with gas jets in the house turned on. They had been asphyxiated.

Attorney Paul A. Budin of Hamilton, King's attorney, said no motive was established and contended Mrs. King might have turned the gas on herself to fulfill threats she was alleged to have made on her own life and those of her children.

Prosecuting Attorney Zelmer G. Morganthaler of Butler county, stressed a note left in the house by King saying he could not "stand it any longer."

PRESTON RETURNS TO FAMILY IN ST. LOUIS

Pardoned by Governor, Former Ohioan Plans To Resume Business.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., April 25—Frank Preston was returned today to his home and family in St. Louis to resume the even tenor of his life, so rudely interrupted a week ago by Ohio parole officers.

In his pocket he carried an unconditional pardon from Governor George White, cancelling his 13-year-old debt to the state of Ohio—incurred when he escaped from Mansfield reformatory in 1918, where he had served but part of a one-year sentence for a South Zanesville, O., robbery.

Last week he was found by authorities after 13 law-abiding years, in which he had acted as a Paintsville, Ky., deputy sheriff, and finally had reached a responsible position as a restaurant manager in St Louis. He had married and has three children.

When he gets home, he said yesterday, he intends to see about setting up his own restaurant. First however, he is going to call on Maurice Weil, St. Louis philanthropist, who was active in gaining him his pardon and who promised to aid him in the future.

Governor White, as he shook hands with Preston yesterday on the steps of the capitol, wished him success and added the advice:

"Watch your step."

"I certainly will," Preston answered fervently.

GENERAL BUTLER IN NEW CONTROVERSY

Fiery Marine Leader Objects to Criticism of Award for Heroism.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, April 25—Major General Smedley D. Butler was at the fore of another international dispute today—this time with himself as the protestant.

In a letter of protest from the marine corps general, against statements attributed to Minister Bellegarde of Haiti in which the minister was quoted as questioning the basis upon which a congressional medal of honor had been given Butler, has been turned over to the state department for investigation.

Minister Bellegarde was quoted in a copyrighted article in the Washington Herald recently as saying a fort for the capture of which Butler was awarded a congressional medal of honor did not exist. The fort in question was known as Port Riviere, in Haiti.

The citation accompanying the award to Butler said General Butler displayed conspicuous bravery during an assault upon the fort on Nov. 17, 1915, after entering through a breach in the wall, described as a hazardous undertaking in view of the firing of the enemy through the passage.

HOPE TO SAVE THURBER'S LIFE

Medical Experts Strive To Defeat Tropical Malady's Attack on Missionary.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., April 25 — Rev. Ralph Thurber, missionary to Korea who is resigned to death from a tropical disease rarely found outside the Orient, has not been entirely given up by science.

Rev. Thurber has diagnosed his illness as distomiasis, probably contracted by eating improperly cooked fish in Korea, and predicted his death possibly within a month However, from Dr. Ernest Carroll Faust, acting head of the tropical disease department at Tulane university, came word that there is hope for decovery if the liver has not been destroyed by the parasites.

Dr. Faust, who saw many such cases in China, said the disease could be checked, if not too far advanced. Dr. Enrique E. Ecker, city hospital consultant, asserted it is not necessarily fatal, at least for several years. He also has studied the disease. Physicians said they hoped to give him several more years of life.

"If faith can cure I may be cured," he said, "but it remains with God and His eternal will. If by May 12 I am still spared I hope to go back to my mission to complete my work. If I am not, it is God's will."

He offered himself to Johns Hopkins university for examination "for the benefit of thousands of poor sufferers who will come after me," but emphasized that he did not want to be a hero.

Doctors said the disease is caused by organisms floating free in the water in the tropics or attached parasitically to fish. It is of several types and attacks the liver, the pulmonary system or the blood stream. When unchecked the whole body is ravaged.

Daily Proverb—"He who does not repair a gutter has a whole house to repair."

Sir Thomas Lipton says that "if a business man can not laugh he has no right to get rich." Maybe so, but the way some of them have become rich certainly is no laughing matter.

The first 1931 Cuban watermelons have reached the big city markets. This is stated merely as a seasonal fact, and must not bt taken as an intimation that we have been indulging in rash expenditure.

Tammany proposes to call an inquiry war council to seek legal advice in formulating a policy toward the Seabury investigation. It has been so long since Tammany has been brought to judgment for any of its many offenses that it seemingly has mislaid and forgotten the whereabounts of its book on the strategy of defense.

Attorney General Gilbert Bettman says that public utilities are threats to the states. The attorney general can not claim priority in arriving at that view; sad experience has caused the most of us to beat him to it.

The German Lufthansa will at once place ten of Dr. Hugo Junkers' new crude oil motors in planes in its regular service. As fire is one of the chief menaces to life when a gasoline propelled plane crashes, the crude oil motor can hardly be regarded as other than a distinct advance in the safety of air travel.

Governor White deserves commendation for vetoing the bill under the provisions of which husbands might be imprisoned for failure to support wives who had deserted them. As it is, far too many women enter into marriage ceremonies merely for the purpose of securing husbands to serve as "anchors to windward."

Both the Basques and the Catalans are now insisting on republics separate and apart from the central Spanish regime. As neither the Basques nor the Catalans are Spaniards, there may be some justice in their insistence, but if each racial group in Spain is going to start a republic of its own, isn't the situation over there liable to become complicated?

The volume of air mail passing through the national capital aggregated 87,227 pounds in March, nearly twenty tons more than in March of last year. Can the fact that 1932 will be a presidential year have had any influence in bringing about the increase? There are an awful lot of political Barkises down in Washington, you know.

Vice President G. E. Pendray, of the American Interplanetary society, just back from Germany, claims that German scientists are predicting that within two years rockets powered by liquid fuel will be transporting mail in fifty-pound lots across the Atlantic every half hour. What troubles us, in the possibility that such a rocket mail line may be operated, is where the pesky things are liable to land.

New Marriage License Law.

Governor White has signed the bill which provides that at least five days, but not more than thirty, must elapse between the filing of an application for a marriage license and the issuance of the license.

Social reformers have been working for the enactment of such a law for quite a number of years, holding that it would result in preventing many marriages hastily entered into without due consideration, only to be regretted later.

It was also urged that a law of this kind would serve to estop joy ride marriages in which one or both the contracting parties might be under the influence of liquor. We are not greatly impressed by this latter contention, however, for the reason that the new law provides that a probate judge may, upon good cause being shown, waive the time requirement. It is hardly conceivable that a judge who would issue a license to a party under the influence of liquor would long hesitaatt about waiving a five-day time requirement.

However, the new law must be judged by its results. If there is a noticeable decrease in divorce cases in the next five or ten years, the decrease many reasonably be credited, in part at least, to the new law. If however, marital discontent is in no degree lessened and the divorce mills grind along as in the past, it will have to be added to the long list of legal remedies which have failed to accomplish the cures hoped for when they were prescribed.

If the five-day notice is generally enforced, it will have the effect of making marriage more difficult, in the face of the fact that divorce is steadily becoming more and more easy of accomplishment. As a sociological proposition, it may seem to many that a better course would be to make the way to marriage easy and the way to divorce hard.

The New French Proposals.

The possibility of an agreement between France and Italy on naval tonnage is more remote at present than at any time since the beginning of the year. What for lack of a better name may be termed the reported "gentlemen's agreement" between the two countries seems to have been construed in one way by Italy and in quite another by France. Italy understood that for the abandonment of her demand for parity, France would retard her building program to such an extent as not to increase her superiority during the life of the present London agreement which will come to an end in 1936.

The revised proposals presented to London and Rome this week have dissipated this understanding. By them, the holding up of the French building program will operate only to 1934 and in no way is to be applied to the construction of submarines. The effect of the French proposal would be materially to increase by replacements her superiority over Italy and so increase her submarine tonnage as to force Great Britain to take advantage of the escalator clause of the treaty that she might have sufficient destroyer tonnage to meet the threat of the added French submarines, and this would open up the tonnage agreement into which Britain entered with the United States and Japan.

In other words, what Great Britain thought might prove a very fitting prologue to the coming general disarmament conference bids fair to be a liability rather than an asset. The fact that France is evidently determined to secure concessions which Britain and Italy are determined not to grant has caused London to become discouraged regarding the entire situation. There is yet a remote hope in London that a compromise may be reached between France and Italy to which Britain may subscribe, but it is admittedly a forlorn hope. The expectation is that there will be a complete failure of negotiations camouflaged as a postponement until the disarmament conference of next year or until the resumption of the London naval conference three years later; either this or an open break with France on one side and Great Britain and Italy on the other.

From any angle from which this week's French proposals may be viewed, they can hardly be seen as other than a step backward toward failure of a hoped-for accord to assure European peace and at the same time lighten the awful burden imposed upon the people of these lands as the result of excessive armaments.

Contemplating in the kindliest possible light the course France has followed since the opening of the London naval conference, it will have to be admitted that she has been the most disturbing factor in the situation and the attitude she has taken this week only serves to accentuate the feeling that she doesn't want to be bound by any pact other than one which on its face would be to her advantage.

The aggregate of cotton cloth produced in American mills during the month of March was 575,508,000 square yards. Who ever imagined that there were enough women and girls in the country with a desire to be "different" to justify cotton weaving to this extent?

Frank Preston Is Pardoned.

The unconditional pardoning of Frank Preston, who escaped from the Mansfield reformatory thirteen years ago after having served two months of his sentence, will meet with very general approval.

Preston, who was living in St. Louis, Missouri, at the time he was apprehended, is married, has a responsible position and a number of friends willing to vouch for his character. The pardon was issued on the recommendation of W. J. Kennedy, assistant state director of public welfare, who was assigned to investigate the case.

The state's purpose in maintaining prisons and reformatories is twofold. It keeps inveterate criminals away from society, and attempts to reclaim accidental criminals. Frank Preston, apparently, was of the latter class. He has conducted his life subsequent to his escape from the Mansfield reformatory, where he made a fine record up to the time of his escape, in such a way as to show that he no longer is an enemy to society. The speedy disposition of his case, resulting in pardon, is satisfying.

Two or three cold nights in succession, and yet the experts hold that the fruit crops hereabout are still safe. Luck seems to bt breaking with us.

It's not so remarkable that the 34,000 employes of a big automobile company in Detroit have been put on a full-time schedule of five and a half days. It's no more than natural that the first corporations to feel the recovery from economic recession should be those which produce the necessities.

The new Spanish republican government has continued the policy of the one-time dictator, Primo de Rivera, who closed all the casinos of the country and prohibited gambling in any form. It's possible that a people so given to games of chance as the Spanish may get to wondering, one of these days, where they gained by the change in the form of government.

Bank records examined by the Chicago police graft grand jury disclosed that some of the police captains up there were making weekly deposits greater than the annual salaries they were being paid on the theory that they were serving the city. Another little sidelight to show why prohibition doesn't prohibit.

Anthony Fokker, in his autobiography, written in collaboration with Bruce Gould, seems inclined to take a laurel leaf or two from the brow of Rear Admiral Byrd and give tribute to Bernt Balchen. Mr. Fokker appears to have forgotten that the honors are usually bestowed upon the leader of an expedition, whether justly or otherwise. On that count, in any event, the rear admiral may claim justification for accepting them, even if those accorded him for his Antarctic trip were probably greater than the exploit, compared with others, deserved.

TENSION IN ROUMANIA.

The crash of the Spanish monarchy would seem to make this a fit time for European kings to let well enough alone. Yet the news from Bucharest represents King Carol as preparing to break with the constitutional system and to set up a personal dictatorship. This argues courage on his part; all the more because there appears to be no sufficient reason why he should thus gamble with fate. Other continental dictatorships have arisen out of necessity, whether national, class or personal. Of the first kind are the existing systems in Hungary, Poland and Yugoslavia: either to fend off the anarchy of defeat, as in Hungary, or the disorders of sectionalism, as in the other two cases. The Fascist coup in Italy was made possible by the fear of red revolution which seized upon the middle classes; and though we may now show that there was no real reason for panic, the Italian state of mind in 1922 was probably genuine enough. The Spanish dictatorship arose out of Alfonso XIII's personal difficulties. He used Primo de Rivera as a shield against the nation's wrath over the calamitous Morocco war.

King Carol is obviously not in Alfonso's position of 1923. He has no national disasters to answer for. His return from exile and to a throne was brought about by the irresistible pressure of poplar opinion, as represented in the powerful Peasant party and directed against a palace clique. The regional and sectional problem did trouble Roumania as it has troubled the other post-bellum states of central Europe. Poland is an entirely new state composed of three sections formerly subject to as many foreign empires. Of Yugoslavia's 12,000,000 people only 4,000,000 live in the old Serbia. Of Roumania's 18,000,000 people only 8,000,000 live in pre-war Roumania. But whereas in Jugoslavia the "reunited" brethren have found it impossible to live at peace and have forced a royal dictatorship, and in Poland the Pilsudski touch has been invited by excessive partisanship and sectionalism, in Roumania the problem seemed to have been put well on the road toward a solution three years ago with the overthrow of the old Bratianu machine and the advent of Premier Maniu as representative of the "new" Roumanians.

Under the circumstances, King Carol's reported moves for the establishment of a personal government would seem to be dictated by arbitrary considerations. They are in consonance with a character which has not impressed itself upon the world as a model of self-restraint and wisdom. To take away self-government from a nation that recently welcomed him home with open arms, and to turn against the very leaders who engineered his return from exile to a crown, argues more than a spice of recklessness. In Roumania the great problems of national reconstruction which her neighbors face have been aggravated by personal politics which hark back to the boudoir and backstairs government of the eighteenth century.—New York Times.

SPANISH HONESTY.

The announcement that the newly-vreated republican regime in Spain will assume the external obligations of the late monarchy and thus maintain the financial integrity of the country, affords a striking contrast to the repudiation of the czaristic debts by the soviet regime in Moscow, which those misguided citizens who are clamoring for the United States to recognize the Moscow defaulters ought not to overlook.

A change of government does not liquidate a debt incurred for the benefit of a nation. The assertion by the soviets that it does, or may, while possibly excellent communist dogma, shakes the faith of other countries in the honesty of the offending government, all along the line. A body of men who can not be trusted in money matters can not be trusted in any matter. Governments do not make money. What they need, they borrow from individuals. The latter are the ultimate sufferers from repudiation.

The United States could better afford to assume the debts still owed by the soviets to American citizens than it could to place the seal of its approval on such double-dealing by recognizing the perpetrators of it as fit to associate with other governments on an equal footing. Spain has shown a fine sense of honor. Soviet Russia should be left outside the pale until it discovers something at least resembling that sense.—Detroit Free Press.

Twenty Years Ago.

It was Tuesday, April 25.

The bureau of census announced that the population of Marion county was 33,971 against 28,678 in 1900 and 24,727 in 1890.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Martin, of Girard avenue, and a daughter to Mr and Mrs. J. J. Smiley, of Mt. Vernon avenue.

C. G. Francis, a local letter carrier, was informed that he had been left an inheritance of between $7,000 and $8,000 by his great aunt, Mrs. Photbe Tuttle, of Oswego, New York, because he bore a "strong resemblance to the Brady family."

A new piano company was organized with N. L. Gebhardt as president. The capital stock was $10,000.

The local Ohio State team scored nine runs and shut out Hamilton. Lewis pitched for Marion.

Mrs. Minnie Carr and Mr Harry Bolander were married at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs Gus Gorenflo, of west Columbia street, by Rev. H. V. McCleary.

"Frights" in Minor Irritations.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

There are many odd words and phrases used in medicine. For instance, "hemoptysis" is a medical word, meaning the spitting of blood. Hemoptysis is an important sign in disease. This symptom is often misleading and frequently it causes unnecessary worry and alarm.

Most persons are under the impression that the presence of blood in the sputum is a sure sign of consumption. This belief has led to much mental worry and unrest. In all probability, the worry has been the real cause of ill health.

It is true that blood-tinged sputum is commonly seen in tuberculosis. However, it is well known that not all cases of early tuberculosis present this symptom. It is equally well known that all cases of blood-tinged sputum do not necessarily imply the presence of tuberculosis.

Recently a man who was quite depressed and worried about his health, talked to me about his trouble. He had been told by several competent physicians that he was in perfect health. But he had noticed blood in his sputum for several months and had been coughing. He was quite convinced he had tuberculosis and that the doctors had overlooked something.

Careful examination revealed this man to have a slight sore spot in the back of the throat. When he expectorated the sputum was blood-tinged.

This is a frequent cause of hemoptysis. Chronic bronchitis, a sore throat or inflamed tonsils may cause a trace of blood in the sputum. Bleeding from a tiny sore in the nose is often confused with hemoptysis from lung disease.

This sign may well be ignored because it may be due to several things. I beg of you not to think you are a victim of tuberculosis if occasionally you cough up a little blood in your sputum.

If you think you have tuberculosis do not brood over it. Worry will not help the condition. Instead, go to your physician and have a thorough physical examination. This will determine whether or not you have the disease, and probably you have not.

Be guided by what your physician tells you. Follow his advice. Every individual should have a thorough physical examination twice a year. In this way, preventable diseases can be avoided.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

R. S. Q—What would cause a cracking sound in the head and about the ear when chewing hard foods? It is very annoying.

A—Popping of the jaw may be due to a number of causes. Massage and application of heat should give increased comfort. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

* * *

S. G. Q—What causes the pupils of the eyes to dilate and what can be done to correct the trouble? I have had my glasses changed without results.

A—This is not abnormal—there are certain things which cause the condition—fear, anger, excitement, or some disturbance of the eye itself may be at the source of the trouble. A thorough examination will determine whether or not further attention or treatment is necessary.

* * *

A. E. Q—What would account for a pain above the eyes? The pain is like a headache.

2—What would cause the right jaw to feel as if it were locked at times? What treatment would give relief?

A—May be due to neuralgia. Be sure that your teeth are in good condition and also make sure there is no catarrhal infection.

2—This may be due to several conditions among which may be partial dislocation. Have an examination so that definite advice and treatment may be outlined.

MRS. J. M. Q—I am troubled with severe headache after eating—what would cause this symptom and what shall I do for it?

A—This may be due to an intestinal upset. Watch your diet, avoid overeating and keep the system clear. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Bruce, Microbe-Hunter.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

There has always been a magic, a romance, about shooting big game. The larger the animal, or the fiercer its disposition, the greater the glory for its extermination. If the wild beast is large, formidable and dangerous, the killing of it is a real achievement. Big game hunters used to be content to return from Africa with trophies, horns, tusks, skins of the fierce creatures they had slain. Now they carry a moving picture machine into the jungle, and send on to the rotogravure section pictures of themselves in action, taken at the very minute of killing the savage creature of forest, river and plain.

But what of the tiny enemies of mankind, which slay their tens of thousands while the huge beasts are slaying only their tens of hundreds? Is there not far greater glory for higher honors due those who exterminate or render harmless these deadly pests of the human race? The world is awakening to the magnitude of the value of such service and honoring the gallant band of microbe hunters.

Among those thus honored will always stand the name of David Bruce. This giant figure, accompanied by a most devoted and faithful co-worker, his wife, devoted years of his life to the most determined, dangerous and exhausting researchers under the most trying circumstances to fight one of the great scourges of mankind.

Bruce was a soldier in the British army But he was not a man-killer by preference; his passion was bacteriology. The discoveries of Theobald Smith had attracted his interest—those researches by which Smith had proved that death may be carried by a tick, and only by a tick, from one animal to another. While stationed on the Island of Malta in the Mediterranean, he became interested in what was called Malta fever and was determined to discover its cause. Although his salary was only a thousand dollars a year, they fixed up a wretched little work-room they dignified by the name of laboratory. And by the dogged persistence which the British call "muddling through," they finally discovered the microbe of Malta fever.

Before he had discovered how the disease was transmitted—a discovery he made twenty years later—he was ordered away from Malta. A new chapter in his career begins in 1894, when as surgeon-major and with his wife as assistant, he goes to Zululand to study the disease called "Nagana." The translation of this word is "depressed and low spirited." So Bruce and his wife establish a modest laboratory at Ubombo and set to work. It is not long before they have discovered trypanosomes in the blood of animals suffering from Nagana. Step by step, through hundreds of experiments with stricken animals they proceed until they prove that the tsetse fly is the carrier of the disease. And finally he showed that the trypanosomes lurk in the blood of wild animals by the tsetse fly.

In efforts to stem the sleeping sickness epidemic and to discover its cause, Bruce, accompanied by his wife, was sent, after the Boer war, by the Royal society to the region of Lake Victoria Nyanza. Through the aid of Apolo, the native dictator, Bruce succeeded in eliminating the sleeping sickness from this region. The carrier was once more his old enemy, under a new name—Klou. It was the tsetse fly. But the battle against sleeping sickness goes on today. Bruce clarified the problem, but he did not solve it. The work of this fly fighter and his devoted wife is among the most inspiring in the entire history of microbe hunting and fighting.—Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Tomato in Early Ohio.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

The Ohio pioneer brought the tomato with him when he came to the new state, but it was known then only as an ornamental plant, desired for its small yellow "love apple" fruit, as it was then called, and generally regarded as poisonous. The tomato is said to be a native of tropical South America, and while it was widely cultivated here in the early days of the country, its food value was not known until French people, driven from the island of St. Domingo to the American shores, were observed using the tomato as an article of food.

Still, as late as the settling of Ohio the "love apple" as the tomato was everywhere known, was looked upon as poisonous, and Tom Ewing tells of an interesting incident of a summer in his early childhood—the summer of 1800—he was born in 1789—at Athens, Ohio. A Mrs. Brown, one of the neighbors, had a little love-apple plant which was bearing fruit and one day while the children were at play suddenly the alarm sounded that little Apphia Brown, Mrs. Brown's daughter, had swallowed a "love apple."

Such medical aid as was available acknowledged that there was nothing that could be done. While the fruit was generally regarded as poisonous, no one knew the nature of the poison. In fact, nothing was done, but the little girl seemed to be as well as any of the children who had not eaten, and the adventure was probably one of a number that were instrumental in disabusing the public mind of the notion that the "love apple" was not edible.

But people give up their prejudices slowly and Mr. Ewing stated that it was many years after that before he saw the tomato a regular table food in Ohio homes. Even in recent years it has been believed by many that eating tomatoes was in some way the cause of cancer. That libel on the tomato was soon proved untrue by medical science.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.

New York, April 25—Here I am flirting with fifty and have never been bothered by gnats until today. Of course, I've seen them around, but outside of a possible quick nod in passing we have never been chummy. They have just been a lot of insects to me. I know too many insects already.

It all began when I opened the window and sat down at my typewriter. A flock of them seemed to think I had opened up a new street, wheeled about and came right in. At first I thought they were spots before the eyes. The kidney pill ad. influence!

Then two of them left the gang and landed on my typewriter paper. At first they just sat there, preened their wings, and then got together for what looked like an exhibition schottische. Come to think, it was a little vulgar for a schottische.

The rest headed for the pantry where I keep jellies, the supply of which is getting pretty low. And it looks like a tough winter ahead. Finally the dancing pair joined them and I thought I was free of gnats until I finished my chore.

But in a few minutes one came back. My impression is that he had just horned in on the gang and didn't belong—the peasant type. He didn't fly, but sort of hopped about. I'm not mentioning names, but I have a suspicion his pappy was a flea.

He hopped from an ash tray to a desk calendar, then to the letter G on my typewriter and from there to the edge of the inkwell. He must have lost his footing there and fallen in. At any rate I didn't see him again. Remind me to tell you some time about the cock-roach and the bottle of ink.

* * *

About this time Ray Long dropped in with another one of his Russian authors—a waxy-faced fellow with a full bright beard. After introductions and cigarets had been lighted, the whole troupe came buzzing back. Aside from never having any luck with company you know how gnats are. I expected any moment for the cheer leader to give a high sign and the whole gang zoom for the Russian's beard. His was that sort of foliage. It wouldn't have surprised you much if a meadow lark popped out.

* * *

I don't believe these were city gnats. They acted to me like a bunch of country jakes—snooping around like. I have the idea they just came over from some place like Redbank, New Jersey, for the day. I'll know better tomorrow. Wherever they come from they have got to understand we have no room around this house for anything else. And if any relatives have their feelings hurt reading that it is just too bad and will they please take a running jump into the canal?

* * *

Another visitor during the day—the gnat motif in literature—was Charlie Driscoll. I rather hoped the gnats would swarm on him just to see his reaction. Or, as we Freudians say, to see if he was gnat conscious. For a time the bull gnat circled around him and I thought he would yell "Come on, boys!" but instead he seemed to get another sniff of the kitchen and away he went—the gang in hot pursuit. The kitchen seems to be the most attractive room in the house to gnats. As a matter of fact they were suckers, for had they gone into the parlor there was a platter of fudge. Also a dish of candied fruits—all exposed and everything.

* * *

Gnats propagate rapidly. I am told they are frequently grand-parents over night. I suppose it's downright ornery, but I'd like to slip two—it would just about hold a pair—into Paul Whiteman's mustache just as he falls asleep. And have him wake up with his pillow swarming.

* * *

So far as I can judge from a hurried inspection of gnats they are just runt flies. The bull gnat, or leader, in buzzing around somehow to me suggested in miniature Paul McCullough, except he was a brunet. And several of the younger ones were the spit image of Lester Allen.

* * *

I just looked up the definition of gnat in the dictionary—"A blood sucking cellucid with aquatic larva." I didn't know they were that grand or I would have had the whole gang stay over in town tonight and take them to Clara Bell Walsh's party.—Copyright, 1931, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, April 25—From musty files in the manuscript division of the Library of Congress there comes the story of a perhaps hitherto unchronicled incident of Admiral Perry's historic expedition in 1854 to open the isolated empire of Japan to western commerce.

The document, written by John Glendy Sproston, was found by a woman engaged in preparations for the establishment of a Japanese division in the library. Sproston was an officer in the expedition.

It was March 28. The United States squadron lay at anchor of Uraga, and negotiations were progressing toward a treaty. Four Japanese ships approached. Japanese commissioners sought and were given permission to visit the admiral's flagship.

"Five or six officers from this ship—the Macedonian—I among them," wrote Sproston, "started in a boat for the flag ship. * * * On the quarter deck were arranged tables, or it might say a table, for they were placed so as to form one continuous array of delicacies. * * *

* * *

"Having walked 'round the ship, they—the Japanese—descended into the cabin with the commander and the captain.

"Their retainers remained on deck and joined us in the onslaught on the numerous edibles there displayed. Champagne, sherry, port, whisky punch, and in fact every kind and quality of wine or liquor that come first to hand satisfied their wants.

"A rather tall and gaunt Japanese that sat next to me drank them all, and was of course rather merry afterwards. The various toasts of the evening were 'Japan and California, may they be united by steam and commerce' and 'The ladies of Japan, may we become better acquainted with them.'

"In the course of the afternoon the commodore made his appearance on deck with the commissioners, and said: 'Gentlemen, we will now adjourn to hear the minstrels.'

"A profound silence followed by a shrill whistle from one of the Japanese followed this.

"The commodore looked grave—no one appreciates a joke less than he does. However, all hands proceeded to the place of amusement. * * * I thought that the commissioners would have died with suppressed laughter—for they never laughed out, as we did.

"I looked, and to my astonishment saw an arm placed affectionately around the commodore's neck, the arm being that of the chief commissioner—what will not champagne do?

"And thus closed a day's amusement."

The next entry that Sproston made was a simple statement:

"This day has the treaty of amity and friendship been signed."

Don't get caught again without water

This is a warning to every farmer. You have seen what lack of rain can do to your crops. Last year, it cost American farmers many millions of dollars.

Yet some of these losses might have been avoided. A Goulds Water System and a sprinkler unit would have kept some crops flourishing in spite of the drought.

Don't get caught again without water. We'll be glad to recommend a water system or water supply pump suitable for your needs. No obligations.

NEW STOCK AT LOW PRICES

Sales Event Follows Stock Reduction Move Last Summer.

The H. O. Crawbaugh hardware store is one of the most complete hardware stores in the state of Ohio. It was founded in 1837, by George H. Kling then managed by Amos Kling and later by Clifford B. Kling. Later it became known as the Haberman Hardware Co. Nine years ago H. O. Crawbaugh purchased the store, changed the name to the H. O. Crawbaugh Hardware and since that time it has been doing business under that name.

Last summer the Crawbaugh hardware had a sale—one of the largest, if not the largest, hardware sale ever held in the state of Ohio. The purpose of this was to reduce stocks in order to remodel the store and materially increase the floor and display space.

The stocks were reduced—the store was remodeled and now Mr. Crawbaugh comes out with a grand opening sale. Mr. Crawbaugh says: "After analyzing the markets for the last few months—necessitating an unlimited amount of research work—we arrived at the conclusion that now is the greatest opportunity for us to add thousands of customers to our newly remodeled and enlarged store—by offering the people of Marion and this section of Ohio the finest display of hardware every hauled into Marion by a train."

Here is a brilliant chance to stock up with hardware, paint, sporting goods, auto tires and supplies for future needs at indescribable savings

Mr. Crawbaugh has a staff of six clerks the year around, but in order to give better service to the thousands who will take advantage of this remarkable sales event, has increased this staff of six salesmen many times.

The Crawbaugh Hardware handles every thing, and only the best of everything, the modern hardware store should stock. Any one wishing to really get bargains should plan to attend this unusual event, The H. O. Crawbaugh Grand Opening Sale. Buy what you want at prices you will be glad to pay.

METAL LATH

Metal lath, the base for successful plastering, is not, as is sometimes thought, a steel lath of the same general shape as a common wood lath. It is a fabric of metal mesh work, cut and expanded from a single sheet of steel. It is to this mesh work with hundreds of little openings for mortar clinch that metal lath owes its great success as a base for stucco and plaster, as it cannot shrink, swell, warp, twist or crack.

OUTSIDE GARAGE SWITCH

One of the smaller details that frequently escape the notice of the prospective home owner is the question of placing an outside switch for the garage. This is sometimes done by wiring a switch to the side of a pole in the garage driveway, at a convenient height for the driver of the machine. In this manner the annoying task of fumbling in the dark for a garage light chain or wall switch is eliminated.

Modern Garage Doors Are Simple and Cheap

Carpenters, owners and users all agree that garages are only as satisfactory as the performance of their doors. They should open and shut as smoothly and easily as the doors of your home. You are in and out of your garage in all kinds of weather, and you do not want to have to dig your way out of drifted snow and ice. You want the doors to stay open against strong winds, so that once you open them, you can run your car in or out without further consideration of the door. If you still struggle with doors that are no more modern than old barn doors, it behooves you to look up garage door hardware and see how simply, conveniently and inexpensively you can modernize your equipment.

REAL ESTATE SHOWS RISE

COOKING EASY WITH PROPER UTENSILS

Local Merchant Recommends Cast Iron Pots and Pans.

It is easy enough to cook tempting meals if you have the right utensils, says H. O. Crawbaugh of the H. O. Crawbaugh Hardware.

Those crisp, brown creamy waffles with a spicy touch of thin bacon and maple syrup. Those piping hot, good griddle cakes. How often have you resolved to have them at home!

Why not have them today? It is so easy to get good meals when you have the right things to work with. Appetites thrive on variety, and to cook different dishes temptingly you really need proper utensils.

Griswold cast iron is the secret of good cooking. It's a special high grade iron developed for better cooking. It heats evenly and stays hot. Foods brown uniformly, with improved flavor. Things don't stick or burn. And as the years go on Griswold cast iron utensils yield a still more appetizing savor.

Griswold cast iron cooking utensils are the tools of good cooks. You will quickly admire their beauty—the practical design of each article, the handsome smooth finish. They will give you more pleasure in cooking, more genuine satisfaction.

THE FIRE BASKET

Beauty and utility are combined in the fire basket. Its lines should be simple and graceful and its construction sturdy enough to withstand hard usage for many years. One can remove the ends, by lifting them out, and burn wood of any length that the fireplace will take. The basket should narrow toward the rear at just the degree to fit a properly splayed hearth plan. Experience shows that sides splayed at an angle radiate heat into the room more effectually than square cornered fireplaces.

If any author's writing is crazy enough, effected critics will pretend it bubbles with wisdom. We see this every day.

CARRY HIGH GRADE PAINTS

Dean & Barry and Pratt & Lambert Goods Sold by Local Firm.

Marion is fortunate in many ways for the outstanding things in its make-up. Among these exceptional or unusual features is the Marion Paint Co., established seven years ago by Thomas F. Coulter and now managed by Leonard Young.

This store is unique in many ways, but especially in the fact that it is one of the largest and most exclusive paint stores in the state. It is seldom that a retail store handles paint supplies exclusively, most stores carrying paints branch out in other lines or only carry point as sidelines. But here specialization in one line has been very successful in all respects.

Serves Large Public

From the very start the Marion Paint Co. was a success, and its products were demanded by home and property owners over a wide territory. Last year hundreds of homes in Marion used paints and varnishes sold by the Marion Paint Co.

The Marion Paint Co. offers to the public a variety of paint called "Lac-Paint" which is exceptional for its use in finishing walls, furniture and woodwork.

Lac-Paint gives a beautiful semi-gloss finish, furnished in 12 shades, also in black and white. It is suitable for interior work such as kitchen walls and ceilings, bathrooms, furniture, baby carriages, bassinets, picture frames, lamp shades, toys, kitchen cabinets, radiators, walls, ceilings and furniture of office buildings. It works and flows freely under the brush and yet dries in five to six hours.

The Marion Paint Co. carries exclusively Dean & Barry's paints and Pratt & Lambert's varnishes. These products are nationally renowned for their high quality as well as their reasonable cost.

High Grade Product

Dean & Barry make an especially fine brand of house paint which is one of the reasons why the Marion Paint Co. has enjoyed such a rapid and successful growth in Marion.

Dean & Barry house paints are not a new and untried experiment, but have given satisfaction for more than a quarter of a century, thus proving themselves worthy to be called "high grade."

They are made from strictly pure lead, pure linseed oil, pure tinting colors and just enough zinc oxide and inerts to make the paint tough and durable and to keep the lead from chalking.

The success of D. & B. high grade paint lies in its being ground and reground in great stone mills and then thoroughly mixed by powerful machinery, thus assuring fineness and uniformity of color that can not be obtained through hand-mixing. The extreme fineness of this grinding assures that more surface will be covered to the gallon.

Real Economy

The real cost of painting depends not upon how much paint costs a gallon, but how long that paint wears after it is applied.

As it costs as much to apply cheap paint as it does paint of proven quality, it is real economy to use the best paint obtainable.

If you are in need of good paints in any quantity you will find it a great satisfaction to trade with the Marion Paint Co.

Ohio Building, Loan Firms Show Increased Earnings

That Ohio home-owners give stability to and create permanent prosperity for businesses, with which they are closely allied is evidence by the report just issued by Ohio building, loan and savings companies that earnings for the first three months of 1931 were in excess of $22,750,000.

According to James A. Devine, secretary of the Ohio Building Association league, the earnings of building and loan companies in Ohio for the first quarter of the year were the highest in history. The steady progress of home financing institutions in view of present day conditions is due, according to building and loan leaders, principally to the fact that most prospective home-owners take the job of paying for a home seriously.

Ohio building, loan and savings companies during the first quarter of 1931 paid two million depositors and stockholders in excess of $16,250,000 in interest and divdends.

Because of volume, total resources of Ohio financing institutions now standing at $1,300,000,000, the savings and loan business in Ohio can, if necessary, show material progress merely through gains within itself. It other words, if depositors and stockholders leave interest and dividends for compound interest accumulation, assets of Ohio loan companies would annually increase in the neighborhood of $65,000,000 without the addition of a dollar of new deposits. On the other hand, these institutions are kept liquid and in funds not alone through new deposits, but because home borrowers annually repay in excess of $100,000,000.

The record of Ohio's greatest group of home financing institutions for the first quarter of 1931 is a practical check on the value of public confidence. The true measure of confidence enjoyed by building and loan companies, however, is much greater than the figures indicate. It must be remembered that Ohio savings and loan companies reached their highest point in assets at a time when most other lines of business were showing a material loss.

Advice to Prospective Buyers of Home Sites

There are certain questions which each home-builder must settle according to his individual requirements.

Must the lot be wide enough for a driveway?

Must it be wide enough to have a flower or vegetable garden on one side?

If a bank wall will have to be built on one side of a lot, is that too great a disadvantage to justify purchasing?

Must the lot be deep enough for a garden and a service court at the rear of the house?

Learn if there are any easements, such as the right of a telephone company to place its poles on the lot, or other corporations to run pipe lines across the property.

HEIGHT OF FIREPLACE

A height of 30 inches is sufficient for fireplaces up to 48 inches wide with a proportional increase in height for larger fireplaces. The depth should be 18 inches, or 20 inches for fireplaces up to 48 inches wide and need not be more than 24 inches in any except for large fireplaces where large logs will be used.

REAL ESTATE MEN TO HEAR PROFESSOR

New York University Educator To Address National Convention.

CHICAGO, Ill.—The possibilities of an entirely new agency for the rapid finance of realty deals, and the influence of the public mind on the structures erected in this country, are subjects to be discussed by prominent men at the general sessions of the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, to be held in Baltimore, May 27 to 30.

Marcus Nadler, assistant director of the international institute of finance, in N. Y. university, a well-known authority on real estate finance in foreign countries will speak before the real estate dealers on "Central Mortgage Banks in Foreign Countries and Their Lessons For Us." Central mortgage banks are banks to which local credit institutions sell their mortgages. The central banks in turn sell their bonds to the public.

Rear Garden Spaces Urged for Recreation

The day of the front porch and the front garden has passed because of unendurable street confusion, and other recreational features must replace them, asserts Earl H. Reed, Jr., of Chicago.

"If our homes are to continue to be truly recreative," says Mr. Reed "we must definitely retire in the outdoor seasons to the more secluded shelter of open terrace, covred porch, garden house or lawn bench located in the long-neglected but charming side of rear spaces in our grounds.

Gloves-Cheese

IF SOMEONE casually mentions to you that your lovely French gloves are "cheesy" don't get hotsy-totsy and leave the party in a huff. The fact of the matter they may not be so far off, literally at least. Would you believe that if it were not for Roquefort cheese, perhaps you would not have such an alluring luxury as a pair of French kid gloves? Going round Robinhood's barn, let it be known that Roquefort cheese is made of the richest's milk. Great flocks of these gentle animals graze over the rugged district of Aveyron in southeastern France and oft' their numbers increase to great proportions. More than 600,000 ewes alone furnish the main ingredient for the cheese. The large glove factories at Millau rely on the lamb skins furnished by these flocks for the manufacture of the soft, fashionable gauntlets. Nothing goes to waste in this country. Hundreds of workers utilize the firmer, white leather in the making of fine garments. Castras Mazamet and Labastide support huge wool works which receive their raw materials from the sheep of Aveyron. Mutton, chops, and other meat from the lamb and sheep is consumed by the people and a minor portion of the ewe's milk is fed to the hogs. The shammy-dressers, the cleaners and all their subsidiaries, the box and packing companies, tin foundries and cotton manufacturers whose fabric is used in sifting the milk, all depend for their existence on the manufacture of the celebrated cheese.

Hanging Lamps

THE heroine of a recent talkie entered her domicile and it being a dark, rainy evening, struck a match and lighted a beautiful big hanging lamp. Which of course brings us to another fashion of a lost era, hanging lamps. They were gorgeous affairs and what parlor was "the last word' without one. And oh, the prestige it gave one. And oh, the prestige it gave one to have two of the affairs. Stands occupied a prominnt position just beneath the lamp and three guesses as to what was on the stand. Thirteen times out of a bakers dozen it was the family Bible, embossed in gold, the family album and a wreath under a glass case. And it wasn't so bad, either.

Your Dog

EVERYBODY sympathized with Commander Byrd when poor little Igloo went where all good doggies go. They knew just how he felt when someone, with kindest of intentions, wanted to give him another dog to sort of fill up the empty place. And they're not all kids either.

GIVES REPORT

Mrs. E. R. Bondley Tells Auxiliary of Memorial.

Mrs. E. R. Bondley gave a report on a memorial to the United Spanish War Veterans in Philadelphia at a meeting of Betsy Ross auxiliary yesterday afternoon in the American Legion dugout. The memorial, consisting of two seats on each side of the main entrance to the court of the Philadelphia Art museum was made possible through contributions by auxiliaries over the state. Mrs. Edith H. Bird, of Toledo, national president, made the presentation this month.

One application for membership was received. Mrs. Eldie Mason, president, was in charge of the meeting.

Lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Lee Howison, Mrs. E. E. Glosser and Mrs. Thomas Glaze. A meeting will be held May 22. Several of the members are planning to attend the annual pig roast at Fremont, held by the camp at that place. A date has not been announced here.
